WINNING SPINS

By George Kanzler

ON NEW RELEASES, TWO TENOR saxophonists present very different concepts of the album format. Jerome Sabbagh harkens back to the days of the LP, and hews to a 40-minute time limit, in a quartet and duo pieces consisting of standards by major jazz composers and originals. Joshua Redman offers many ideas on an hour-long album with something completely new for him — vocals.

Vintage, Jerome Sabbagh (Sunnyside), features four quartet tracks. Three are his originals, and three are duos. Those three duo selections are more than worth the price of admission. His partner is the iconic pianist Kenny Barron, and their repertoire is a Billy Strayhorn ballad and two Thelonious Monk numbers. Kenny was the pianist in the Monk tribute band Sphere (Monk's middle name), holding down the piano chair along with three veterans of Monk's quartets, for over a decade. Suffice it to say that Kenny knows Monk's music intimately. Kenny is also renowned for his duo work, the most legendary being his People Time recordings with the late tenor saxophonist Stan Getz.

Billy Strayhorn's "A Flower Is A Lonesome Thing" is one of the duets here. It too is very reminiscent of the recordings with Getz, as Jerome's sound — especially on ballads — has distinct echoes of Getz's one and of his approach. But the album's gems are the two Monk tunes. "We See" is sprightly and intensely interactive, as Jerome and Kenny spar in long, tandem solo sections. The ballad "Ask Me Now" has both musicians illuminating Monk's distinctive theme in ruminative yet definitive explorations.

Joined by bassist Joe Martin and drummer Jonathan Blake, Jerome and Kenny complete the quartet on three lively Jerome originals. The title track is the catchiest, an echo of mid-20th century hard bop. The quartet's ballad, "On A Misty Night" by Tadd Dameron, is another lyrical highlight for both Jerome and Kenny.

where are we, Joshua Redman (Blue Note), was conceived during the coronavirus pandemic, and incorporates multiple concepts. Cued by the title, one of them is American geography or an American travelogue. All the songs concern a city or area of the country. Another major concept is Joshua's decision to build the album around a vocalist-collaborator. He enlisted Gabrielle Cavassa, a young singer from the West Coast who now resides in New Orleans, where much of the album was recorded. A third concept, an outgrowth of Joshua's compiling of tunes and tracks, is what he calls "mash-ups." They include incorporating parts of Woody Guthrie's "This Land Is Your Land" into Joshua's original meditation, "After Minneapolis (face toward mo(u)rning)" with his own lyrics (another first for him), combining Count Basie and Jimmy Rushing's "Going to Chicago" with Sufjan Stevens' "Chicago" as "Chicago Blues;" mixing Thelonious Monk's "San Francisco Holiday" with "I Left My Heart in San Francisco;" and including excerpts from Charles Ives' "Three Places in New England" into "That's New England" (once recorded by Betty Carter).

Gabrielle has an intimate, seductive voice. When she first appears on Joshua's "Minneapolis..." her voice is more a wash of sound than words, as her soft sibilance and tendency to lenition (the weakening of consonants) render the lyrics murmuringly less intelligible. But she is much clearer on jazz and pop standards like "By the Time I Get To Phoenix" and "Do You Know What It Means To Miss New Orleans?" Joshua's tenor sax and Gabrielle's voice have a fine chemistry, reminiscent of famous pairings like Billie Holiday and Lester Young. They are wonderfully in synch on "Where Are You?" and "Stars Fell On Alabama."

Joshua also makes judicious use of guest artists to augment his quartet of Aaron Parks, piano; Joe Sanders, bass; and Brian Blade, drums. Appearing on tracks associated with their hometowns are guitarists Peter Bernstein and Kurt Rosenwinkel, vibist Joel Ross, and trumpeter Nicholas Payton.

Jerome Sabbagh debuts his album Vintage at Bar Bayeux on Sept. 27, with Lex Korten, piano; Joe Martin, bass; and Jonathan Blake, drums. He also leads a quartet with guitarist Ben Monder at Beattie-Powers Place on Sept. 23. Joshua Redman comes to 92NY on Sept. 27.

MARTIN WIND:

A Trio That Was Meant To Be

By Ken Dryden

MARTIN WIND IS A VIRTUOSO bassist with an extensive background in performing and teaching jazz and classical music. Martin played both classical and jazz in his teens in Germany, though after earning his diploma as an orchestra musician, he came to the U.S. to study jazz at NYU, where his professors included Jim McNeely and Kenny Werner. Martin quickly built a reputation as a skilled, inventive bassist; soon he was getting calls to fill in around the city.

Martin's sizable discography includes numerous dates as a leader or co-leader in addition to extensive work with guitarist Ulf Meyer and pianist Bill Mays, drummer Matt Wilson, and others. Martin is enthusiastic about his new CD, Counterpoint (Laika Records), with pianist Jim McNeely and trombonist Ed Neumeister. "I was well aware of Jim's music when I was a classical bass student in Germany. He would work with the WDR Big Band in Cologne, and I knew some recordings that he did with Getz." At NYU, Martin studied composition with Jim and took advantage of his open office hours to play duo and discuss music, including the bassist's compositions.

"I've meant to record with him as a pianist for a long time. He was going to be on my CD Light Blue, but he hurt his thumb and I had to replace him." Martin got another opportunity to work with Jim when he booked a studio for a project with a European musician which did not materialize. "I already had Jim and the studio lined up. He's such a busy guy, writing and conducting, that I thought, 'This was meant to be!'"

Ed Neumeister was an occasional substitute for Jim at NYU when Martin was a student. Now Ed and Martin are faculty colleagues. "Ed sat in with Dena DeRose's trio at Birdland, and I've always admired his writing and playing," Martin says. "I thought it would be great and uncommon to have two lower ranged instruments together with piano. The three of us were on tour when Jim brought his tentet to Europe many years ago. We have been on the bandstand together, just not in this unique [trio] configuration." Martin savors playing with Ed in a small group setting, saying, "It's like you hear somebody talking to you."

Martin enjoyed the sessions with Jim and Ed, explaining, "There were no egos. It was about finding a sound together and making the songs come out as good as possible. When I finalized the personnel, I looked at some of my compositions and songs I had played with Jim in the past, but my first idea was to ask him if we could play his big band chart 'Extra Credit' (from Group Therapy) with the trio. Jim was in Frankfurt at the time and replied, 'Wow, that's quite an unusual idea.' One day later, he sent me the trio arrangement of that chart. I've played it with the Vanguard Jazz Orchestra so much that it has become a hit for college big bands. The way we opened it up with those free, short solo improvisations in between [orchestrated parts], it gave it a completely new face, and Jim really loved it."

Another song on the new CD, "In the Wee Small Hours of the Morning," was also on Group Therapy. "I always loved those alternate changes. I love how we move back and forth between Jim's changes and the song's original changes. It was my idea for him to blow over his changes as I blew over the original ones. I sold it as a spur-of-the-moment, brilliant move. 'Counter My Point' is the one composition I specifically wrote for this album. I really wanted to write some counterpoint. We had a one-night warm up gig at the Deer Head Inn to explore the material

MICHAEL DEASE*SMALLS JAZZ CLUB / SEPTEMBER 1-2

Though he excelled as a tenor saxophonist in high school, Michael Dease was recognized early in his career as a virtuoso trombonist by masters like Curtis Fuller, Slide Hampton, Wyckiffe Gordon and Steve Turre. Michael's luminous, impressive discography as a leader and sideman frequently showcases his diverse skills as a composer and arranger. He has a surprise in store for his upcoming Smalls Jazz Club sets, as he will be playing both baritone saxophone and trombone. He is joined by veteran pianist and frequent collaborator Geoffrey Keezer, bassist Jared Beckstead-Craan, and drummer Gary Kerkezou. Michael's latest CD is The Other Shoe: The Music of Gregg Hill (Origin). His upcoming Oct. 6 release, Speak Low (Posi-Tone Records), features him exclusively on baritone saxophone. KD

NICOLE ZURAITIS*BIRDLAND / SEPTEMBER 4

It is hard to think of Nicole Zuraitis as either a pianist or a vocalist. Whether on-stage or on any of her iconic albums, she personifies the famous adage that the whole is always greater than the sum of the parts. As a vocalist, her beguiling mezzo-soprano shimmers as it floats through the air, a sound of evanescent beauty. As a pianist, she accompanies herself with hypersensitivity; rhythms and harmonies blend with an over-pedaled soft focus. It is impossible not to be entranced by her performances. Expect the arcs of her radiant tones to do just that when Nicole takes the stage with celebrated bassist Christian McBride, guitarist Gilad Hekselman, organist Miki Hayama, and drummer Dan Pugach to debut music from How Love Begins, her sixth album. She also brings her quintet to The Jazz Loft on Sept. 22 and her quartet to Jazz on Main on Sept. 23. RDG

CLAUDIA ACUÑA*STANGL ROAD FOR CENTRAL JERSEY JAZZ FESTIVAL / SEPTEMBER 9

Those who know Claudia Acuña treasure her authentic expression and true lyrical mastery. Her warmth radiates from every bandstand. With each offering, the Chilean New Yorker challenges herself to evolve her sound, always sharing the full instrumental range of her voice and supreme storytelling. Since the early aughts, Claudia has released five leader recordings and toured the world with some of our most creative voices. In 2022, her widely anticipated album DUO featured intimate collaborations with Kenny Barron, Carolina Calvache, Christian McBride, Regina Carter and Fred Hersch, among other singular artists. Claudia's joined by pianist Manu Koch, bassist Carlos Henderson and drummer Yayo Serka. Expect a transfixing performance of sophisticated phrasing, beautiful melodies and joyful energy. SJ

MELANIE CHARLES*LACKAWANNA PLAZA FOR MONTCLAIR JAZZ FESTIVAL / SEPTEMBER 9

At once grounded and ethereal, Melanie Charles' expression entrances listeners from the moment she takes the stage. The singer, songwriter and producer performs with a consciousness of space and time. In her dynamics alone, she reveals musical narratives — often reflecting social and cultural issues of generational resonance — and creates lively dialogue among her fellow artists. Over the course of her rising career as a leader, Melanie has embraced a range of styles and collaborated with Wynton Marsalis, SZA, Mach-Hommy, Gorillaz and The Roots. She has toured music from her celebrated recording Y'all Don't (Really) Care About Black Women (Verve, 2021) — including authentically-Melanie takes on a diverse repertoire — across sprawling outdoor festivals and intimate venues. SJ

BILLY CHILDS*SMOKE JAZZ CLUB / SEPTEMBER 13-17

Discovered by Freddie Hubbard and a featured sideman for Sting, Dave Holland, Dianne Reeves, Joe Henderson, and many others, the Los Angeles-based Billy Childs is one of the most formidable pianists on both coasts ever since his 1988 Windham Hill debut LP, Take For Example This ... Blessed with a classical-trained, jazz-honed pianism largely sprung from Herbie Hancock, Billy's eclectic catalog ranges from his 2014 Map to the Treasure: Reimagining Laura Nyro and his Grammy-winning 2017 post-bop album Rebirth, to his latest film music inspired CD, The Winds of Change. He is making his Smoke Jazz Club debut with trumpeter Sean Jones, bassist Hans Glawischnig, and drummer Ari Hoenig. Come hear how it sounds when West swings East. EH

LUCY YEGHIAZARYAN BIRDLAND THEATER / SEPTEMBER 22-23

Lucy Yeghiazaryan hails from Armenia, where as a young child listening to her Dad's jazz records, she fell in love with the American songbook. When Lucy and her family emigrated to America, she won a scholarship to study jazz while still a teen. In 2015 she was a finalist in the Thelonious Monk Vocal Competition. Lucy's warm, sonorous voice lends soulfulness to ballads, and she can switch gears to convey a vibrant energy on up-tempo numbers. She has shared the stage with world-class musicians such as Houston Person, Harold Mabern and Emmet Cohen, with whom she often performs. Lucy's third album, Lonely House, was released this year on the LaReserve record label. Accompanying her at Birdland are Grant Stewart on tenor saxophone, Greg Ruggiero on guitar, Neal Miner on bass, and Byron Landham on drums. JZ

TY STEPHENS PIONEER'S PLAZA FOR MORRISTOWN JAZZ & BLUES FESTIVAL / SEPTEMBER 22

Singer Ty Stephens has performed all over the world at venues like the Sporting Club in Monte Carlo and Shanghai Jazz in Madison, N.J. The award-winning singer/songwriter has appeared on and off Broadway in productions of Sophisticated Ladies and Marilyn, An American Fable. Ty has recorded with iconic artists such as Harry Belafonte, Peggy Lee, and Chuck Mangione. He studied dance with the Alvin Ailey School and the John Hines Dance Theatre, performing in The Wiz and The Genius of Ray Charles. The New York Amsterdam News calls his group "a must-see band to be experienced live." Joining Ty is Soul Jaazz comprised of pianist Richard Cummings, guitarist R.T. Taylor, bassist Gene Torres, and drummer Tony Cintron. DJS

BEN ALLISON DIZZY'S JAZZ CLUB / SEPTEMBER 28-30

Over the past 30 years, Ben Allison has built a career dedicated to the advancement of the jazz language. Whether accompanying saxophonists Lee Konitz and Michael Blake, fronting his own groups, or co-founding the Jazz Composers Collective, Ben has kept his eyes focused on any and all artistic pursuits. Since his debut album Seven Arrows in 1996, he has released over a dozen more, his most recent being 2021's Moments Inside, with JazzTimes stating in its review that the album "demonstrates that he's always moving forward but never at the expense of his past." For his concerts at Dizzy's, Ben is joined by his Moments Inside crew of guitarists Steve Cardenas and Chico Pinheiro and drummer Allan Mednard. EW

JIM ROTONDI THE DJANGO / SEPTEMBER 29

A Montana native, Jim Rotondi arrived with his trumpet on the New York City jazz scene in the 80s and was soon heralded as "one of the best of the post-Hubbard generation" on allaboutjazz.com. He made significant marks as both a leader and a sideman. He collaborated with many jazz greats including the Ray Charles and Lionel Hampton big bands, Toshiko Akiyoshi Orchestra, George Coleman, Charles McPherson, and with his memorable sextet, One For All. His forthcoming album, Finesse, is soon to be released on the Cellar Live label. Joining Jim at The Django as well as at Mezzrow on Sept. 28 are Jon Boutellier on saxophone, David Hazeltine on piano, John Webber on bass, and special guest drummer Mario Gonzi from Vienna, Austria. JZ

NAT ADDERLEY JR. NEW BRUNSWICK PERFORMING ARTS CENTER FOR MIDDLESEX COUNTY JAZZ FESTIVAL / SEPTEMBER 30

Not merely the scion of one of the quintessential family dynasties of modern jazz, Nat Adderley Jr. has made a name for himself in his own right as a musical talent with prodigious gifts. Though in some circles he may be known best for his work as an arranger, the pianist and composer Nat Adderley Jr. has enjoyed a thriving career as a bandleader as well. His output with his current quartet features deft and lively interpretations of the bebop canon. His approach to the keyboard toggles between modernism and impressionism and something harder to place — a style of playing that keeps the listener on his toes. His quartet includes Mike Lee on saxophone and flute, Chris Berger on bass, and Dwayne "Cook" Broadnax on drums. CK

ENDEA, OWENS'

Cookout Jazz

By Eugene Holley, Jr.

WHEN YOU SEE THE DETROIT native bassist/bandleader Endea Owens working as a sidewoman with Jon Batiste, Diana Ross, Wynton Marsalis, playing in Steve Colbert's Late Show Band, or fronting her own ensemble called The Cookout, you see a jazz musician who wants listeners to swing and have a good time. "I love cookouts!" Endea proclaims. "I want my music to feel like cookout. And I want to let people know that you can have a good time and listen to jazz. Those two worlds can live together."

Endea brings those two worlds together onstage this month at JazzFest White Plains on Sept. 10 and Jazz At The Lake at Lake George on Sept. 15.

Joining Endea on those dates are vocalists Shenel Johns and J. Hoard, alto saxophonist Louis Fouché, trumpeter Kris Johnson, drummer Jerome Jennings, and keyboardist Keith Brown. Endea and company expect to play a vibrant mix of her own compositions and selections by Pharoah Sanders, Nina Simone and Herbie Hancock. "My setlist includes a lot of original music," she declares, "[including the selections] 'Feel Good,' 'For the People,' 'Cycles,' and 'Where The Nubians Grow.' I might also play a song I wrote called 'Detroit Fight Song,' based on Charles Mingus' 'Haitian Fight Song.' As for standards, I always play 'The Creator Has a Master Plan,' 'Four Women,' and 'Tell Me a Bedtime Story.'

Some of those selections will appear on Endea's long-awaited debut album, entitled Feel Good Music, scheduled for release this month, which elaborates Endea's concept of the jazz cookout. "Some of the happiest memories of my childhood and my adult life come from cookouts," she fondly recalls. "I think about the love of my family. Even if people were arguing, literally, a day ago, at a cookout they're all getting along. Everyone's happy. Everyone's dancing. Everyone's singing. So it's just nothing but good memories. And I think about the different types of music that's played [there], and that's such a Black experience. And I just wanted my whole album to represent my Black experience through jazz."

Endea's Black experience as a jazz artist started in about the 10th grade at the Detroit School of Arts where she taught herself how to play the bass after years of studying the violin. She would later be incredibly fortunate to have several powerful mentors including trumpeter Marcus Belgrave, who taught generations of Detroit jazz artists including Kenny Garrett, Regina Carter and Geri Allen, and bassist and Michigan State University teacher Rodney Whitaker. In addition, Endea's first major influence, bassist Marion Hayden, co-founded the all-female group Straight Ahead, and a final mentor is bass legend Ron Carter.

"Marcus was my very first mentor," Endea fondly recalls. "He was very, very special to me. We were very close. We shared the same birthday, and he would call my whole family to make sure I went to rehearsal. I met Rodney when I was 15 at the Detroit School of Arts, where he played a solo bass concert that really changed my life. I had never seen anyone play like that. I never took bass lessons from Marion, but she is one of those people who has always been there [for me]. She recommended me to sub for her on a tour with the Spelman College Jazz Ensemble. I've been able to take a few lessons from Ron. He's great. I think the most that I've learned from him is just to take myself extremely seriously. And also, pay attention to detail."

Endea graduated from Michigan State University in 2015, Juilliard in 2018, and solidly established herself in New York City. She joined Jon Batiste's Stay Human Band; appeared on his Grammy Award-winning album, We Are, and played in the

by Jamilla Counts

WHILE JAMILLA COUNTS' BOOK may not have the academic and literary brilliance of the Welsh-born Amanda Villepastour's Ancient Text Messages of the Yorùbá Bátá Drum (Routledge, 2016), it may still be counted among works important not only for documenting the history of Black American Music but the history of music itself. Here's why: first, it is a critical source of anecdotal evidence of the riches contained in music, that most ancient of human expressions. Second, it acts as a wonderful journey through the river of African sources in the music that flows through South America via Afro-Brazilian music, all the way to present itself in the Black American Music commonly known as jazz. Third, like Amanda's book, Jamilla's asks us to consider pressing a proverbial reset button on our knowledge of human history.

The writer wears the mantle of a griotte, narrating aspects of a historic nature in a flood of anecdotes. She does this as a dialogue between Andrew Scott Potter who, Jamilla says, "reminds us about the great James Price Johnson, whose artistry would use phrases with the OPANIJE cadence, but fast..." and of "Bira Reis [who] reminds us in his YouTube [videos] that the drums call the Orixaïs..." Both quotes refer to the Ketu Candomblé Codes played on the Afro-Brazilian drum called the "rum." Both suggest that a reset on our understanding of the African origin of human expression is critical to our understanding and appreciation of Afro-Brazilian history.

There is much to unlearn, or certainly to re-learn, about music; and it all begins with the word "history" and its connotation, especially in relation to the evolution of music through time. The word "history" itself is derived from Ancient Greek ιστορία (historia) meaning inquiry or knowledge acquired by investigation to document humanity's past, a narrative to examine and question past events. But history, in relation to time, is incomplete and still has debatable mysteries.

Jamilla's book — like Amanda's work on the Yoruba codes — contains a compelling theory that the unravelling of these mysteries lies in cracking the "codes" of the Ketu Candomblé music of Brazil. Both works are about human expression in music and align, not so obliquely, with the theories of the great Senegalese physicist, anthropologist and historian, Cheikh Anta Diop (1923-1986) who — in Antérieurité des Civilisations Negres: Mythe ou Vérité Historique (Présence Africaine, 1955, 1967) — determines that the world's first civilization in Africa "flourished for 10,000 years while the rest of the world was steeped in barbarism." So, how old is music?

When asked in a documentary by Wolf Koenig, "Who created music?", the great Igor Stravinsky answered, "It was created probably by God, and I think... not think, but I'm sure, that... He created [it by a] big drum and cymbals ..." Stravinsky's whimsical version of music at the dawn of time and work like Jamilla's book, with its references, all add ontological heft to the fact that the African drum and its codes may be at the heart of music and human expression itself.

Jamilla Counts is the granddaughter of the griot Maulawi Nurudin. She is also the adopted granddaughter of the late pianist Ahmad Jamal. Black American Music Evolution: The Ketu Candomblé Codes is published by The Butterfly Typeface Publishing. No price indicated.

JAZZ ANECDOTE BY BILL CROW

Bill Crow's books "Jazz Anecdotes" and "From Birdland to Broadway" can be found at your favorite bookstore, and at www.billcrowbass.com along with many interesting photos and links.

Jim Ford, a pianist in Binghamton, sent me this:

Several years ago, our Mason Warrington Orchestra was playing for a dance at an American Legion in Endicott, New York. The emcee asked for a show of hands: "How many of you have been married for 25 years? 35? 50?", etc. When he got to 65 years, only one hand went up, that of our trombonist Chuck Louden. The emcee asked him, "To what do you attribute your long marriage?"

Without a moment's hesitation Chuck said, "I keep my mouth shut."

before we recorded."

Martin is excited about the trio's upcoming Mezzrow performances. He shares, "Everyone knows Jim as such a great arranger, conductor and composer; but he's under-the-radar as a pianist. Bill Cunliffe recently told me that Jim is among his top ten pianists of all time. Kenny Werner told me that he didn't understand how people don't know how heavy Jim is as a pianist. It is very rare that Jim performs now. He moved to Maine a few years ago and has been concentrating on writing, so people need to take the opportunity to hear him live."

Martin Wind's trio — Martin Wind, bass; Jim McNeely, piano; Ed Neumeister, trombone — celebrates the release of Counterpoint at Mezzrow on Sept. 7, Deer Head Inn on Sept. 8, Maureen's Jazz Cellar on Sept. 9, and Beattie-Powers Place on Sept. 10.

Oscar-nominated film, Judas and the Black Messiah. But her most prominent job came in Aug., 2019, when she joined the house band for The Late Show With Stephen Colbert.

Endea extended her good fortune and created the Community Cookout in 2020 — a nonprofit organization that provides free food and music to underserved communities in New York City. "Because I am from Detroit, and we are about community and mentorship, I wanted to also give back."

In 2022 Endea wrote an opus dedicated to the Black freedom fighter Ida B. Wells for Jazz at Lincoln Center. Later this year, she'll compose a new work for the Cincinnati Orchestra. "I'm happy that people are listening to my music."

Endea Owens performs at the JazzFest White Plains on Sept. 10 and the Lake Gorge's Jazz At The Lake on Sept. 15

A Moment You Missed by Fran Kaufman Hot House Contributing Photographer

One of the great pleasures of arriving early in a jazz club is the chance of seeing behind the scenes as the musicians prepare for their gig.

Such was the case Sunday, July 20 when I arrived at Smoke Jazz Club to catch Eric Reed's quartet. As I was waiting in my seat, I could see drummer Billy Drummond just off stage in a corner. There, he was using one of the club's seats as an ad hoc drum. You can almost hear it!
